

Blow The Wind Southerly

Eleanor Saint dreamt of being a doctor or nurse, but the year is 1851 and as the daughter of a mining agent in the North East of England, Eleanor is expected to make a respectable marriage. Into this dreary prospect comes Francis Tait, a man called to the mission field and Eleanor finds herself on the way to Fiji, where she hopes to be able to follow in the footsteps of her heroine, Florence Nightingale. In her strange new home, Eleanor faces many dangers, not the least being the distraction caused by the arrival of Morgan West, a wildly attractive but unscrupulous American... Una Horne is fast establishing a reputation as the new Catherine Cookson
