

Black Jack

The hand of Gainor glided into his bosom and came forth bearing a white handkerchief. His right hand slid into his coat and came forth likewise bearing a long revolver. Gentlemen, he said, the first man to disobey my directions I shall shoot down unquestioningly, like a dog. I give you my solemn word for it! And his eye informed them that he would enjoy the job. He continued smoothly: This contest shall accord with the only terms by which a duel with guns can be properly fought. You will stand back to back with your guns not displayed, but in your clothes. At my word you will start walking in the opposite directions until my command Turn! and at this command you will wheel, draw your guns, and fire until one man falls or both! A duel is only one of the dangers faced in this Max Brand western classic adventure from one of the accepted masters of the Wild West novel!
