CHERRY-LEAF SCORCH ( Gnomonia erythrostoma). This fungus is the cause of an epidemic disease of the cherry, and badly affected specimens have been received during the past year from a cherryorchard in Taranaki. The owner reported that several trees had been attacked the season before last, and were now dead. During the past season the disease had spread rapidly, and a great many trees were now affected. This disease was originally observed in the North German district about twenty years ago, and is now fairly widely distributed; but it is only in certain places that the loss attributable to it is very severe. The specimens sent were, however, very badly affected, so that it would appear as if it would become a serious matter to our cherry-growers if it were once allowed to become established in their orchards. The fungus which causes this disease belongs to a genus of the Ascomycetes, named Gnomonia, which contains only a few species, notably G. erythrostoma, the species under discussion, and G. quercus-ilicis, which is a source of loss to the live-oak (Quercus ilex). The cherry-leafscorch fungus attacks the leaves, and in these the dark-coloured mycelium is developed. Affected leaves soon change from a healthy green to a dullbrown colour, and then wither. Many fall to the ground, but the majority keep hanging to the branches throughout the winter. During the autumn discoloured spots appear, and on these long slender hooked spores, known as conidia, are developed in oval-shaped pycnidia, which are slightly imbedded in the dying and dead tissues of the leaves. During the winter the mature or ascospore stage is readied...
