Like birds to a Lighthouse, children from the length and breadth of India flock to Bombay and that explains why the Umerkhadi Remand Home happens to be the biggest in Asia with a daily average population of five hundred children, boys and girls included. Having worked in Remand Home as a Probation Officer it did not take long for Mr. Murthy to realize that every child that happened to be there had a definite story to tell. A few uncommon cases have been recounted and presented as fictionalized stories. Nevertheless, original contents have been kept intact. With the exception of two instances, in all other cases, names of children have been changed so that, as per law, official secrecy is maintained. All other issues are explained at relevant stages of the text as the stories unfold.
